9. Exactly proportioned.
The prince is here at hand: please your lordship
To meet his grace, just distance 'twixt our armies? Shak.
10. Full; of full dimensions.
His soldiers had divers skirmishes with the Numidians, so that once the skirmish was like to have come to a just battle.
Kneller's History of the Turks.
There is not any one particular abovementioned, but would take up the business of a just volume. Hall's Orig. of Mank.
There seldom appeared a just army in the civil wars.
Dutchess of Newcastle.
11. Exact in retribution.
See nations slowly wife, and meanly just,
To bury'd merit raise the tardy buff.
Vanity of Human Wishes.
- JUST. adv.
1. Exactly; nicely; accurately.
The god Pan guided my hand just to the heart of the beast. Sidney.
They go about to make us believe that they are just of the same opinion, and that they only think such ceremonies are not to be used when they are unprofitable, or when as good or better may be established. Hosier.
There, ev'n just there he stood, and as the spoke,
Where last the spectre was, she cast her look. Dryden.
A few seem to understand him right; just as when our Saviour said, in an allegorical sense, except ye eat the flesh of the son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.
Bentley's Sermons.
'Tis with our judgments as our watches, none
Go just alike; yet each believes his own. Pope.
2. Merely; barely.
It is the humour of weak and trifling men to value themselves upon just nothing at all. L'Estrange.
The nereids swam before
To smooth the seas; a soft etealian gale
But just inspir'd and gently swell'd the sail. Dryden.
Give me, ye gods, the product of one field,
That for I neither may be rich nor poor;
And having just enough, not covet more. Dryden.
3. Nearly.
Being spent with age, and just at the point of death, Democritus called for leaves of new bread to be brought, and with the steam of them under his nose prolonged his life. Temple.
- JUST. n. f. [justus, French; justitia, Latin.] Mock encounter on horseback;
tilt; tournament.
None was either more grateful to the beholders, or more noble in itself, than justs, both with sword and lance. Sidney.
What news from Oxford? hold those justs and triumphs?
Shakespeare's Richard II.
Among themselves the tourney they divide,
In equal squadrons rang'd on either side;
Then turn'd their horses heads, and man to man,
And fled to speed oppos'd, the justs began. Dryden.
- To JUST. v. n. [justus, French.]
1. To engage in a mock fight; to tilt.
2. To push; to drive; to justify.
- JUSTICE. n. f. [justus, French; justitia, Latin.]
1. The virtue by which we give to every man what is his due.
O that I were judge, I would do justice. 2 Sem. xv. 4.
The king-becoming graces,
As justice, verity, temperance, stabilities,
I have no relish of them. Shakespeare, Macbeth.
The nature and office of justice being to dispose the mind to a constant and perpetual readiness to render to every man his due, it is evident, that if gratitude be a part of justice, it must be conversant about something that is due to another. Lee.
2. Vindicative retribution; punishment.
This shews you are above
Yon justices, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can vengeance. Shakespeare, King Lear.
He executed the justice of the Lord. Deut. xxxiii. 21.
Left justice overtake us. Jl. lix. 9.
Examples of justice must be made, for terror to some; examples of mercy, for comfort to others: the one procures fear, and the other love. Bacon's Advice to Villiers.
3. Right; assertion of right.
Draw thy sword,
That if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice. Shakespeare, King Lear.
4. [Justiciarius, Lat.] One deputed by the king to do right by way of judgment.
And thou, Eldras, ordain judges and justices, that they may judge in all Syria. 1 Esdr. viii. 23.
5. JUSTICE of the King's Bench. [Justiciarius de Banco Regis.] Is a lord by his office, and the chief of the rest; wherefore he is also called capitalis justiciarius Anglie. His office especially is to hear and determine all pleas of the crown; that is,
such as concern offences committed against the crown, dignity, and peace of the king; as treasons, felonies, mayhems, and such like: but it is come to pass, that he with his assessors heareth all personal actions, and real also, if they

- be incident to any personal action depending before them. Give that whipster his errand, He'll take my lord chief justice warrant. Prior.
6. JUSTICE of the Common Pleas. [Justiciarius Communium Pla-citum.] Is a lord by his office, and is called dominus justiciarius communium placitorum. He with his assessors originally did hear and determine all causes at the common law; that is, all civil causes between common persons, as well personal as real; for which cause it was called the court of common pleas, in opposition to the pleas of the crown, or the king's pleas,
which are special, and appertaining to him only. Covel.
7. JUSTICE of the Forest. [Justiciarius Forestie.] Is a lord by his office, and hath the hearing and determining of all offences within the king's forest, committed against venison or vert;
of these there be two, whereof the one hath jurisdiction over all the forests on this side Trent, and the other of all beyond. Covel.
8. JUSTICES of Assize. [Justicarii ad capiendas Assisas.] Are such as were wont, by special commission, to be sent into this or that country to take assizes; the ground of which polity was the ease of the subjects: for whereas these actions pass always by jury, for many men might not, without great inconvenience, be brought to London; and therefore justices, for this purpose, were by commission particularly authorised and sent down to them. Covel.
9. JUSTICES in Eyre. [Justicarii itinerantes.] Are so termed of the French eyre, iter. The use of these, in ancient time, was to send them with commission into divers counties, to hear such causes especially as were termed the pleas of the crown, and therefore I must imagine they were sent abroad for the ease of the subjects, who must else have been hurried to the king's bench, if the cause were too high for the country court. They differed from the justices of Oyer and Termi-ner, because they were sent upon some one or few especial cases, and to one place; whereas the justices in eyre were sent through the provinces and counties of the land, with more indefinite and general commission. Covel.
10. JUSTICES of Gaol Delivery. [Justicarii ad Gaulas delivrandas.] Are such as are sent with commission to hear and determine all causes appertaining to such as for any offence are cast into gaol, part of whose authority is to punish such as let to malignity those prisoners, that by law be not bailable. These by likelihood, in ancient time, were sent to countries upon several occasions; but afterward justices of assize were likewise authorised to this. Covel.
11. JUSTICES of Nisi Prius are all one now-a-days with justices of assize; for it is a common adjournment of a cause, in the common pleas, to put it off to such a day: nisi prius justiciarii venerint ad eas partes ad capiendas assisas; and upon this clause of adjournment they are called justices of nisi prius, as well as justices of assize, by reason of the writ or action that they have to deal in. Covel.
12. JUSTICES of Peace. [Justicarii ad Pacem.] Are they that are appointed by the king's commission, with others, to attend the peace of the country where they dwell; of whom some, upon especial respect, are made of the quorum, because some business of importance may not be dealt in without the presence of them, or one of them. Covel.
- The justice,
In fair round belly with good capon lin'd,
With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances,
And so he plays his part. Shakespeare, As you like it.
Thou hast appointed justices of the peace to call poor men before them, about matters they were not able to answer.
Shakespeare's Henry VI.
The justices of peace are of great use; anciently they were conservators of the peace; these are the same, saving that several acts of parliament have enlarged their jurisdiction.
Bacon's Advice to Villiers.
- I sing no harm
To officers, jugglers, or justice of peace. Dome.
- To JUSTICE. v. a. [from the noun.] To administer justice to any. A word not in use.
As for the title of proscriptio, wherein the emperor hath been judge and party, and hath justiced himself, God forbid
but that it should endure an appeal to a war. Bacon.
Whereas one Styward, a Scot, was apprehended, for intending to poison the young queen of Scots, the king delivered him to the French kings, to be justiced by him at his pleasure. Hayward.
- JUSTICEMENT. n. f. [from justice.] Procedure in courts.
JUSTICER. n. f. [from to justice.] Administrator of justice.
An old word.
He was a singular good justicer; and if he had not died in the second year of his government, was the likeliest person to have reformed the English colonies. Davies on Ireland.
- JUSTICESHIP. n. f. [from justice.] Rank or office of justice. Swift.
- JUSTICIABLE. adj. [from justice.] Proper to be examined in courts of justice. JUSTIFIABLE.

JUS

- JUSTIFIABLE. adj. [from justify.] Defensible by law or reason; conformable to justice.
Just are the ways of God, Milton's Agonistes.
And justifiable to men.
Although some animals in the water do carry a justifiable resemblance to some at land, yet are the major part which bear their names unlike. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
- JUSTIFIABLENESS. n. f. [from justifiable.] Rectitude; possibility of being fairly defended.
Men, jealous of the justifiableness of their doings before
God, never think they have human strength enough.
King Charles.
- JUSTIFIABLY. adv. [from justifiable.] Rightly; so as to be supported by right.
A man may more justifiably throw crofs and pile for his opinions, than take them up by such measures. Locke.
- JUSTIFICATION. n. f. [Justification, French; justificatio, low Latin.]
1. Defence; maintenance; vindication; support; absolution from guilt.
I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay of my virtue. Shakespeare, King Lear.
Among theological arguments, in justification of absolute obedience was one of a singular nature. Swift.
2. Deliverance by pardon from sins past.
In such righteousness
To them by faith imputed, they may find justification towards God, and peace
Of conscience. Milton's Parad. Lost, b. xii.
'Tis the confirmation of that former act of faith by this latter, or, in the words of St. Paul and St. James, the confirmation of faith by charity and good works, that God ac-cepteth in Christ to justification, and not the bare appearance of faith to bring forth works, if those works, by the fault of a rebellious infidel, will not be brought forth. Hammond.
- JUSTIFICATOR. n. f. [from justify.] One who supports, defends, vindicates, or justifies.
JUSTIFIER. n. f. [from justify.] One who justifies; one who defends or absolves; one who frees from sin by pardon.
That he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus. Ro. iii. 26.
- To JUSTIFY. v. a. [Justifier, French; justifier, low Latin.]
1. To clear from imputed guilt; to absolve from an accusation.
The law hath judg'd thee, Eleanor;
I cannot justify, whom law condemns. Shakespeare, H. VI.
They say, behold a man gluttonous, a friend of publicans and sinners; but wisdom is justified of her children. Mat. xi.
How can man be justified with God? Or how can he be clean that is born of a woman?
There is an exquisite subtilty, and the same is unjust; and there is a wife man that justifies in judgment. Ecclesi. x. 25.
You're neither justified, nor yet accus'd. Dryden.
2. To maintain; to defend; to vindicate.
When we began in courteous manner to lay his unkindness unto him, he seeing himself confronted by so many, like a resolute orator, went not to denial, but to justify his cruel faithhood. Sidney.
What the did, whatever in itself,
Her doing seem'd to justify the deed. Milt. Par. Lost.
My unwilling flight the gods enforce,
And that must justify our sad divorce. Denham.
Yet still thy foils shall stand in thy defence,
And justify their author's want of sense. Dryden.
Let others justify their missions as they can, we are sure we can justify that of our fathers by an uninterrupted succession. Aberbury's Sermons.
3. To free from past sin by pardon.
By him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses. Acts xiii.
- To JUSTIFY. v. n. [from just, justus, French.] To encounter; to clash; to rush against each other.
While injury of chance Puts back leave taking, justifies roughly by All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoindure. Shakespeare, Troilus and Cressida.
The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justify one against another in the broad ways. Nab. ii. 4.
Argo pass'd
Through Bosphorus, betwixt the justifying rocks. Milton.
Late the clouds
Lulling, or puff'd with winds, rude in their shock,
Tine the flant lightning. Milton's Paradise Lost.
Not one starry spark,
But gods meet gods, and justify in the dark.
Courters therefore justify for a grant;
And, when they break their friendship, plead their want. Lee.
Murmuring noises rise in every street;
The more remote run stumbling with their fear,
And, in the dark, men justify as they meet. Dryden.

JUV

- When elephant 'gainst elephant did rear
His trunk, and castles justled in the air; Dryden.
My sword thy way to victory had thrown.
Was there not one who had set bars and doors to it, and said hitherto shall thou come, but no farther, and here shall thy proud waves be staid; then might we well expect such vicissitudes, such justlings and clashing in nature. Woodw.
I thought the dean had been too proud
To justle here among a crowd. Swift.
- To JUSTLE. v. a. To push; to drive; to force by rushing against it.
Private and single abilities should not justle out and deprive the church of the joint abilities of many learned and godly men. King Charles.
Many excellent strains have been justled off by their intrusions. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
The surly commons shall respect deny,
And justle peerage out with property. Dryden.
It is not to be imagined that the incongruous alphabets and abuses of writing can ever be justled out of their possession of all libraries. Holder.
Running in the dark, a man may justle a post.
Collier of the Eagerness of Desire.
Absent good, though thought on, not making any part of unhappiness in its absence, is justled out, to make way for the removal of those uneasinesses we feel. Locke.
We justled one another out, and disputed the post for a great while. Addison's Guardian.
- JUSTLY. adv. [from just.]
1. Uprightly; honestly; in a just manner.
Nothing can justly be despised, that cannot justly be blamed;
where there is no choice, there can be no blame. South.
With ignominy scourg'd, in open fight;
Next view the Tarquin kings; th' avenging sword
Of Brutus justly drawn, and Rome restor'd. Dryden.
The goddess, studious of her Grecians fate,
Taught them in laws and letters to excel,
In acting justly, and in writing well. Prior.
2. Properly; exactly; accurately.
Their artful hands instruct the lute to sound;
Their feet assist their hands, and justly beat the ground. Dryden.
- JUSTNESS. n. f. [from just.]
1. Justice; reasonableness; equity. Justness is properly applied to things, and justice to persons; though we now say the justice of a cause, as well as of a judge.
It maketh unto the right of the war against him, whose success is commonly to be according to the justness of the cause for which it is made. Spenser on Ireland.
We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it. Shakespeare.
2. Accuracy; exactness; propriety.
I value the satisfaction I had in seeing it represented with all the justness and gracefulness of action. Dryden.
I appeal to the people, was the usual saying of a very excellent dramatick poet, when he had any dispute with particular persons about the justness and regularity of his productions. Addison's Guardian.
- To JUT. v. n. [This word is supposed to be corrupted from jut, perhaps from shoot.] To push or shoot into prominences; to come out beyond the main bulk.
Insulting tyranny begins to jut
Upon the innocent and awlefs throne. Shakespeare, R. III.
All the projected or jutting parts should be very moderate, especially the cornices of the lower orders. Wotton.
The land, if not restrain'd, had met your way,
Projected out a neck, and jutting to the sea. Dryden.
A port secure for ships to ride,
Broke by the jutting land on either side;
In double streams the briny waters glide. Dryden.
It seems to jut out of the structure of the poem, and be independent of it. Broom's Notes on the Odyssey.
- To JUTTY. v. a. [from jut.] To shoot out beyond.
Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;
Let it pry through the portage of the head
Like a brass cannon: let the brow o'erwhelm it
As fearfully, as doth a galled rock
O'erhang and juty his confounded base, Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean. Shakespeare, H. V.
- JUVENILE. adj. [juvenilis, Latin.] Young; youthful.
Learning hath its infancy when it is almost childish; then its youth, when it is luxuriant and juvenile; then its strength of years, when it is solid; and lastly, its old age, when it waxeth dry and exhaust. Bacon's Essays.
- JUVENILITY. n. f. [from juvenile.] Youthfulness.
The reformation of grey heirs to juvenility, and renewing
the exhausted marrow, may be effected without a miracle.
Glanv. Scrp. c. 21.
Customary strains and abstracted juvenilities have made it difficult to commend and speak credibly in dedications.
Glanv. Scrp. Preface.
